Data insights in civil justice: Land and Environment Court

The report examined the quality and utility of Land and Environment Court of NSW administrative data for policy purposes, based on all civil cases finalised for the first time between June and December 2016.

what were the types of cases?

who was involved in the cases?

34% business against local council 32% individual against local council

8% individual against individual 4% local council against individual how long were the cases?

28 weeks on average

for all cases

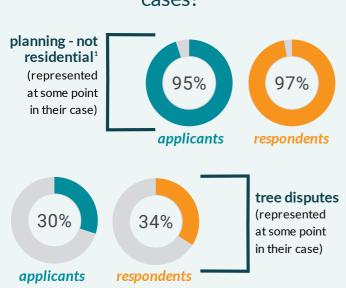

tree disputes on average 15 weeks

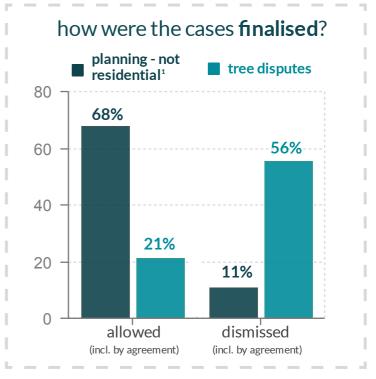

planning - not residential¹ on average 30 weeks

were parties represented in the cases?

¹includes large residential developments such as multi-units and mixed use, and other developments

²restricted to small single residential dwelling matters